

Second Liberty Baptist Church and Cemetery

New Kent County, Virginia

Second Liberty Baptist church is probably the first church formed in New Kent County by black people after the Civil War. It dates from 1866, two years before the 13th Constitutional Amendment abolished slavery. Black people who lived in St. Peter's District were required to worship at Emmaus Church and were restricted to the balcony, a common practice at the time. In 1865 some of the Emmaus members and others who had moved from Charles City County started a house-to-house prayer band. This prayer band grew so large it could not accommodate everyone. One of the members, Fielding Lewis, donated property and a brush arbor was built and used for worship. Later William Crump, a member of Emmaus and owner of Crumps Mill, donated timber from which the original log church was built. Rev. William Harvey Patterson, a recognized leader among the black members of Emmaus, was in the forefront of the movement to organize the new church. The name that appealed to the members was "Liberty," since they had indeed received their freedom in more ways than one. Since a predominantly white church at Diascund Bridge was already named Liberty, the members chose the name "Second Liberty Baptist Church." Over the years Second Liberty has prospered and is now in the process of building a new facility next to the current one.
